Bella! Tosca will make an Italian wine lover's heart sing such is its depth and breadth. The country is covered with enthusiasm by sommelier Ali Fong, who plays indigenous varieties off new stars like chardonnay or cabernet sauvignon. Half bottles and large formats abound. Mark ups are generous.

A brilliant Italian-only wine listing in perfect harmony with Monteverdi's home style cooking. Small, family-run wineries are in the spotlight with indigenous grapes, sometimes close to extinction, featured prominently. A kind of Slow Food wine list if ever there was one. Great prices, lots of love.

Wow. Here's a list that shows understanding of traditional, fine wine and some of the more exciting, emerging wine regions, with an eye on the organic and biodynamic for good measure. Impressive in length and scope, an exceptional global list that dares to show some difference. Kudos.

It's refreshing to see a list beating to the sound of its own drum. The focus on wines from Argentina is relevant and exciting – there are some regional suggestions upfront plus a good range of malbecs. The rest of the list is commendable, with producer and regional spotlights dotted throughout.

Take comfort in the presence of the recognisable labels, with the list being stronger in reds than whites. Some dependable Australian, Italian and Spanish reds – or try a Gimblett Gravels Syrah from NZ. Prestigious Bordeaux for those who choose – though consider vintage carefully across the board.

This is a wine list built around price or, rather as the management promotes "extremely attractive prices." They are, indeed, very keen, which will allow many a diner to go upmarket, maybe to Vega Sicilia, Guigal or grand marque Champagne - all very affordable from this strong cast of Europeans.

A short tour around the world of wine stopping by some of the more commercial wineries mixed with the high end. Table wines on this tight list tend to be dominated by the New World but Champagne has its own substantial and thorough section. Lab mixology drinks to start look like good fun.

Not a wine in sight, it's just wall to wall sake on the Yamazato listing. The good news for sake novices are the tasting notes provided on each and every selection. Aficionados are especially well catered for. Do browse through the liqueurs covering everything from pear to plum to barley and wheat.

There are some mighty adventurous food tastes here: pig's stomach, chicken kidney and pork intestine that may see diners heading for the Chinese spirits or Japanese sake listings (which are excellent). Otherwise, this exceptional list is up to the task with an exhaustive array of top world wines.

An established wine list that confidently presents a range of fine French wines with strong support from Europe. Some of the best value can be found among the Premier Crus. Good to see Beaujolais and sparkling reds embraced, great company for Cantonese cooking.
